'This is the book that academics, development researchers and practitioners have been seeking for a long time. The book addresses the most important issues which development researchers and practitioners cope with each and every day' - Dr Tran Tuan, Director, Research and Training Centre for Community Development, Hanoi, Vietnam.

This is the book that academics, development researchers and practitioners have been seeking for a long time. The book addresses the most important issues which development researchers and practitioners cope with each and every day - Dr Tran Tuan, Director, Research and Training Centre for Community Development, Hanoi, Vietnam.

This is a most excellent book for those who are looking to go into International Development. It gives good insights into the world of development.

I recommend this text to students in Development Studies and especially those who are interested in reading, analysing or undertaking research in this rapidly developing field. This is a well organised text, sharing insights into the origins of the field and its associated narratives and discourse. It reminds us of the importance of theory and values, and highlights the debates, controversies and critiques. It is full of useful tables, boxes, frameworks, and concepts - each could well form the basis of much thought, discussion, and reflection. It is generously referenced, pointing out additional readings of note. This book is provocative and engaging, inviting readers to explore issues, their own perspectives and positioning, and encouraging them (us!) to think about our own values, objectives, and approaches. This is not a heavy book; it is light, readable, rewarding and rich with insights and stimulation.
