Disease: Identification, Prevention And Control

Synopsis

This text presents current information about infectious and non-infectious diseases and their histories, from a nonclinical point of view; it is written to support the needs of health education students and professionals, rather than clinicians. Including an overview of the principles of disease occurrence and of the body's defenses, it provides key details and stimulating information regarding the body's vulnerability to disease.

Dr. Hamann recently retired as Coordinator of Academic Programs in Health at the UW-Superior and has a PhD from the University of Minnesota in School Health Education with a minor in Public Health. She has over 30 years of experience teaching health education and introduced a course at the UW â€” Superior on infectious and non-infectious diseases for students who are going into education, corporate health promotion or Community Health.

I bought this book for another senior level public health class and found it incredibly easy to read. It is succinct and to the point. Even if you never take the class, this is an excellent 'quick' reference book on diseases, the etiology, causes, etc. I think if you have never read anything like this you will find the informatino fascinating.

Interesting and though provoking.

The textbook condition was not good. The sides were bent, the plastic cover was peeling, and it looked old. The condition was not "good" as the seller stated.

just what my wife needed. Got the order fast and it was exactly as it was ordered. I am very happy with it.

This textbook is interesting and easy-to-read. The chapters are broken down nicely and give good overviews of disease while not getting too technical.

Worth the money, in great shape. Glad I got the book early so I can get a head start on the class!

This book was delivered in a very quick amount of time. It was in wonderful shape, and I would definitely use the company again. It was great!

the book that i purchased from the seller was in great condition! as good as new.
