Born the son of a coal miner who died of black lung, Richard Wolfe developed a passion for clean coal technology. Wolfe earned his Ph.D. in nuclear engineering at the University of Cincinnati, works with the U.S. Department of Energy and holds a patent to remove mercury pollutants from coal. Wolfe is a vintner who traveled the world bringing back vines to create a wine industry in the North Carolina high country. He established the first commercial winery in this region of the Appalachians. Thirty-five vineyards owe their genesis to his work. This memoir touches on these passions, but the focus is the fulfillment of his dream of climbing Mount Kilimanjaro in Africa. This too comes from boyhood experience. Wolfe was the projectionist in the local theater, and as a teenager in 1957, showed the movie The Snows of Kilimanjaro. He vowed then, to "someday climb that mountain."

Interesting, very personal story of Dr. Wolfe's preparation and climb of Africa's highest mountain, at 70 years old. Congrats Sir, you certainly met the challenge.

This was a personal experience for Dr. Wolfe. I could relate to his experience. I recommend this book to anyone who is interested in climbing this great mountain! An experience of a lifetime!

I really enjoyed reading this book. It is very inspirational and proves your never to old to pursue your dreams.

Age is no excuse for adventure. "Climbing Kilimanjaro at 70" is a true adventure memoir from Richard A. Wolfe as he reflects on his own outstanding life and how a long and storied career and how he won't stop living or working just because he's past his own retirement age. A story of the determination what can have in life, "Climbing Kilimanjaro at 70" is a remarkable and fun read of one man's endless determination, highly recommended.
