

The book was found

Organic: Farmers And Chefs Of The Hudson Valley

Synopsis

The Hudson Valley, New York has become an epicenter for the local, organic,Â Â sustainable food movement. With its rich agricultural land, the awareness forÂ Â sustainable living, and the growing demand for local, organic food, the farm-to-table,Â Â locavore movement has become a way of life in the Hudson Valley. OrganicÂ Â spotlights the Hudson Valley as a region at the forefront of this movement andÂ Â features the portraits and words of the dedicated farmers who are committed toÂ Â growing and producing food using sustainable methods, and the chefs who echo theirÂ Â beliefs and pay homage to the food they produce, including such notables as:^{} Amy Hepworth of Hepworth Farms, works on a 7th-generation, family-owned farm Dan Barber, chef and co-owner of Blue Hill at Stone Barns was named one of the world'sÂ Â most influential people in 2009 in Time's annual "Time 100"^{} Zakary Pelaccio, owner of Fish & Game, is famous for building Brooklyn's first gastropub andÂ Â pioneering NYC's nose-to-tail culinary movement* Ken Greene at the Hudson Valley Seed Library provides many local producers with heirloomÂ Â and open-pollinated garden seeds and protects 15,000 years of agricultural history!* Steffen Schneider at the 400-acre biodynamic Hawthorne Valley Farm has helped educate overÂ Â 13,000 kids since 1972 as part of the farm's Visiting Students ProgramÂ Â The over 100 portraits of the farmers and chefs of the Hudson Valley wereÂ Â photographed using the wet-plate collodion process, a technique developed in theÂ Â 1850s when the art of photography was in its infancy. With the use of large woodenÂ Â cameras and brass lenses, glass plates are hand coated to produce one-of-a-kindÂ Â ambrotype images. The amber toned images remind us of a time when the cultivationÂ Â of land was a manual process that linked the farmer directly to the soil. "Organic" isÂ Â one of the most misunderstood and often misused words describing food today. InÂ Â narrating their own stories, the farmers and chefs share their philosophy about what itÂ Â means to grow and live organically and sustainably.

Book Information

Hardcover: 224 pages

Publisher: powerHouse Books (October 23, 2014)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 1576877108

ISBN-13: 978-1576877104

Product Dimensions: 9.3 x 0.9 x 12.5 inches

Shipping Weight: 3.5 pounds (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 5.0 out of 5 stars 11 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #715,026 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #77 in Books > Arts & Photography > Photography & Video > Nature & Wildlife > Gardens #149 in Books > Science & Math > Agricultural Sciences > Agronomy #470 in Books > Crafts, Hobbies & Home > Gardening & Landscape Design > By Technique > Organic

Customer Reviews

" . . . for anyone who likes their locally-grown, pesticide-free carrots with a dusting of nostalgia, Organic is tasty indeed.- TIME.com" The very intimate portraits of the farmers and chefs of this beautiful and intensely personal book reach out from the page as you gaze into their souls, looking for a place at the table."- Examiner.com "Organic: Farmers and Chefs of the Hudson Valley" is a gorgeous tome (no doubt intended for your coffee table) that has no recipes, just stunning full-page photographs by Francesco Mastalia of the new rock stars: farmers."- GOOD"Francesco Mastalia's ambrotypes are among the finest being made in the world today." - Sublime Magazine"Part work of art, part tribute to farmers who love the earth they work, this new book deserves to be out where people can see it."- Mothernaturework.com "It's a perfect marriage of process and subject, both using hands-on techniques to produce remarkable results." The amber toned images reflect that the cultivation of land was a manual process that linked the farmer directly to the soil." - Lenscratch "What we love about the book is that you look through all of the beautiful portraits, you see a real patchwork of people from all different walks of life."- Beekman 1802 Boys (on Cooking Channel)"We hope you enjoy reading and admiring the beautiful photographs that Francesco's journey took him on."- Organic Hudson Valley"The result is less a last word on the term 'organic' and more of an elegant and provocative meditation on our connection to the land, our food, and our community." - Edible Hudson Valley As Seen On:Yahoo! News Francesco Mastalia has traveled the world, photographing tribal, religious, spiritual, and indigenous peoples. His book Dreads, published by Workman Artisan, is a photo documentary on the history of dreadlocks. The book is now in its seventh printing, sold worldwide, and includes an introduction by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alice Walker.Joan Dye Gussow, PhD, is known as the matriarch of the organic, locavore, small-farm movement. She is a mentor to today's leading food activists. She has wielded considerable influence in academia (as a nutrition and education professor at Columbia University), in government (as a member of the National Organics Standards Board), and in the advocacy world (serving on the Center for Food Safety's Advisory Board). She has written extensively, including, most recently, Growing Older: A Chronicle of Death, Life, and Growing Vegetables (Chelsea Green, 2010). She makes her home in the Hudson Valley.

Great read

The perfect gift for a Hudson Valley resident and organic food lover who supports local vendors. Next up, a copy for myself!

This book is incredibly beautiful!

Found this on a blip on Yahoo. Loved the pictures in the blip, so purchased the book. Not disappointed. . . marvelous book.

The collection of individual farmer's stories is inspiring and the photography is beautifully done. Exquisite presentation.

Stunning book.

what beautiful photography.

How does one classify a book of photographs of Hudson Valley organic farmers and chefs that includes accompanying text describing what the word organic and the practice of organic farming means to them? Especially if the photographs are taken with the wet plate collodion process developed in 1850 using a handmade wooden box of a camera and an original lens. Is this a farm-to-table epistle, a regional title or a history of photography book? That is the dilemma of your bookseller. For our concerns, let's just say it is the sum of all three, its whole a paean to an organic way of living coupled with an organic way of growing and cooking the food we eat. It is the men and women and their backbreaking labor of love to grow clean food in the Hudson Valley. It is the locavore ethos of our ancestors to be owned again by their descendants. It is the farm-to-table movement writ large on ambrotypes, the chemicals with their light-sensitive properties mixed and spread by hand on black glass plates to produce one-of-a-kind images of one-of-a-kind people to grace these pages. People like Chef Ric Orlando, who is a "Clean Food" cookbook author and TV host who owns two restaurants in the Hudson Valley. He commented on local and organic food and what it's like cooking in the Hudson Valley: "I opened the original New World Home Cooking on Zena Road in a little haunted stone house in 1993. We called it 'global flavor, with local pride.' We always try to incorporate as much local and organic into our products, and then turn it into global flavors." The Hudson Valley is a great place to cook. It's a great place to be in the food world. The one thing about being an organic chef, a clean food chef, is that every day you have to weigh decisions, you have to decide what's best overall. That's the biggest challenge. Farmer Martin Stosiek of Markristo Farm in Hillsdale, NY, a certified organic farm since 1992, put it this way: "Organic is using natural inputs, manures, cover crops, and things like that, but it's also how you treat the land. It's using land and maintaining the soil biology and the wildlife in the area. Organic farming also has something to do with the markets, how you work with your customers, how you treat your help." Farmer Marnie Mclean of Thompson-Finch Farm in Ancram, NY, certified organic for about 28 years, contributed this wisdom: "Organic is about the earth: the habitat, the hedgerows that attract all kinds of birds and insects, things working in harmony, the health of the soil, health of the people, long term sustainability. It's the only way for the planet." This sensibility, excerpted here, but expanded upon by each of the more than 100 contributors, brings renewed hope in the survival of our planet, and in the community that is small-scale organic farming in the Hudson Valley. Mark Ruffalo summed it up in his foreword this way: "This book isn't primarily about the concept of organic, although there is plenty to learn here on that front. It is really a celebration of those who live it and engage it. The people in this book speak a special language that has been developed between the land, the living organisms in that land, and the person growing or raising food there." Reading Organic Farmers and Chefs of the Hudson Valley, or rather, looking at the full-page photographs, it is easy to believe that the 9x12 portraits speak to you of their lives just by the way they are posed. Then, reading the opposite page of text, you have another portrait of their lives giving you a real insight into the minds of the people who grow and prepare our food. You'll end up liking them all and wishing you knew a few better. About the photographs, Francesco Mastalia focuses his 1870 lens on the eyes, capturing a sometimes unsettling and sometimes inviting, but always mesmerizing image, with the stern look and blurred edges due to the exposure time as much as the process. Gail Buckland says in her introduction: "Each color of the collodion mix requires a different exposure time. A little like cooking. Every plate Mastalia makes is different, just like every meal prepared by a master chef." It is the unique quality and power of the photographs that add weight to the organic philosophy of the contributors. And it is their words that warrant a second look at the images. In the end you shouldn't care which category the book Organic Farmers and Chefs of the Hudson Valley is placed in. It is enough that the very intimate portraits of the farmers and chefs of this beautiful and intensely personal book reach out from the page as you gaze into their souls, looking for a place at the table.

Download to continue reading...

Organic: Farmers and Chefs of the Hudson Valley AMC's Best Day Hikes in the Catskills and Hudson Valley: Four-Season Guide to 60 of the Best Trails, from the Hudson Valley AMC's Best Day Hikes in the Catskills and Hudson Valley, 2nd: Four-Season Guide to 60 of the Best Trails from the Hudson Highlands to Albany Inside Chefs' Fridges, Europe: Top chefs open their home refrigerators Where Chefs Eat: A Guide to Chefs' Favorite Restaurants (2015) New Prairie Kitchen: Stories and Seasonal Recipes from Chefs, Farmers, and Artisans of the Great Plains Study Guide: Ace Organic Chemistry I - The EASY Guide to Ace Organic Chemistry I: (Organic Chemistry Study Guide, Organic Chemistry Review, Concepts, Reaction Mechanisms and Summaries) The Founding Farmers Cookbook: 100 Recipes for True Food & Drink from the Restaurant Owned by American Family Farmers Organic Homemade Lotion Recipes - For All Skin Types (The Best Lotion DIY Recipes): Lotion Making For Beginners (organic lawn care manual, organic skin care, beauty and the beast) Growing Great Garlic: The Definitive Guide for Organic Gardeners and Small Farmers Growing Good Things to Eat in Texas: Profiles of Organic Farmers and Ranchers across the State (Texas A&M University Agriculture Series) Farm-to-Table Desserts: 80 Seasonal, Organic Recipes Made from Your Local Farmers’ Market Organic Coffee: Sustainable Development by Mayan Farmers (Ohio RIS Latin America Series) Legends and Lore of Sleepy Hollow and the Hudson Valley AMC's Best Day Hikes in the Catskills and Hudson Valley: Four-Season Guide to 60 of the Best Trails from New York City to Albany (AMC Hiking Guide) Backroad Bicycling in the Hudson Valley and Catskills (Backroad Bicycling) Best Hikes with Children in the Catskills and Hudson River Valley Fifty Hikes in the Hudson Valley: From the Catskills to the Taconics, and from the Ramapos to the Helderbergs The Best of the Hudson Valley and Catskill Mountains: An

Explorer's Guide, Fourth Edition (Explorer's Guides) Michelin USA: New England, Hudson Valley
Map 581 (Maps/Regional (Michelin))

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help