Tom Kirkendall was born in 1956 in San Francisco. In 1969 he moved to Wilmington, North Carolina, where he developed an interest in competitive surfing, cycling, and photography. These interests were reflected in his part-time jobs in a surf shop, a bicycle shop, and a camera store. After completing two years at the University of North Carolina in Wilmington, he packed his worldly possessions a surfboard, a bike, and his cameras into his VW bug and headed west to finish his schooling at the Brooks Institute of Photography at Santa Barbara, California. He graduated from Brooks in 1980. Vicky Spring was born in Seattle in 1953 and helped out with the family photography business in her youth. She attended the University of Washington and graduated in 1975, then spent the next two years in the Peace Corps teaching math in the Central African Republic. Back home in Seattle, she worked a couple of years at REI just for fun, then packed her worldly possessions - a bike, her skis, and her climbing gear - into her Datsun and headed south to

Santa Barbara, California, to attend the Brooks Institute of Photography. Vicky and Tom met at Brooks. They married a couple of years later and became Kirkendall-Spring Photographers, specializing in landscapes, nature's wonders, and occasional forays into action sports. While building up their catalog, they produced numerous guidebooks to their favorite sports: bicycling, skiing, and hiking. When their image numbers topped the 10,000 mark, they weaned themselves out of guidebooks and concentrated on photographing our beautiful country. Tom and Vicky live in western Washington near their two grown children. For more of their work, visit kirkendall-spring.photoshelter.com.

Excellent overview of Washington State. Classic photos and some that aren't the well known scenes. I gave it to family and others. For visitors to the state it is a good purchase as it can relieve you of having to take pictures.

Outstanding photography and organization of content
